Psychology

Psychology introduces the student to the methods and findings of the scientific study of human behavior and mental processes, plus the application of scientific principles in helping to solve personal and societal problems, all within the context of biblical principles and Christian faith. The major is intended to prepare the student for graduate study in psychology, counseling, theology, education, and related fields. It may be combined with the Pre-Seminary or Teacher Education program. Graduates may also seek immediate employment in fields such as the social services, business, government, law enforcement, and allied health.

Concordia University - Philosophy

The philosophy curriculum at Concordia is based on the mission statement of the university. Philosophy is one of the fundamental disciplines in academia. It is that discipline which studies the most basic issues, and which also ties together the other disciplines. It sharpens critical thinking skills and gives students an understanding of the ideas that move society. The American Philosophical Association guidelines for philosophy majors emphasizes that there are four different models for the teaching of philosophy: the historical model, the field model, the problems model, and the activity model; all of which are utilized in the Concordia philosophy minor.

Concordia University - Religious Studies

Concordia University offers an inter-disciplinary major and minor in the fields of religion and philosophy. These courses of study take into account the significant role that religion and philosophy have played in shaping the life and thought of people in both the Eastern and Western world. They offer students the opportunity to examine many of the religious and philosophical ideas that have motivated great movements and controversies which shape the spiritual and intellectual framework of the modern world.
